PREFACE.

I have compiled this work merely through a regimental pride, without any desire or hope of remuneration for my labor; and, by the assistance (subscription to one or more copies of the work) of my brothers-in-arms and kind friends, I have published it, that they may know where the Regiment has been, and what it has done for the country; and that they may view the records of the officers who have had the honor of belonging to it.

I have labored under many disadvantages in obtaining the necessary information for the publication of the work, but have succeeded much better than I had anticipated, although the earlier part of the history is somewhat incomplete.

To Brigadier General LORENZO THOMAS, (formerly an officer of the Regiment,) late Adjutant General United States Army, I am indebted for many facts connected with the movements of the Regiment from 1815 to 1860, which facts have been compiled from the muster-rolls of the Regiment, and from personal recollection. From 1861 to 1871, all facts enumerated in the work are from notes taken by myself while serving with the Regiment, or while on the staff of the Brigade or Division in which the Regiment was serving.

HISTORY OF THE FOURTH INFANTRY.

The FOURTH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY, UNITED STATES ARMY, was organized in accordance with the following act of Congress, approved May 30, 1796, but the exact date at which the formation of all the companies was completed is not known.

Act of May 30, 1796,

Fixing the military establishment of the United States, so as to be composed, after the last of October, 1796, of * * Four regiments of infantry, each to consist of one lieutenant colonel commandant, two majors, one adjutant, one paymaster, one surgeon, two surgeon's mates, two sergeant majors, two quartermaster sergeants, two musicians, and eight companies. Each company of infantry to consist of one captain, one lieutenant, one ensign, four sergeants, four corporals, two musicians, and fifty-two privates.

1796-'97-'98-'99-1800-'01-'02.

The Regiment organized by the above act was officered, in 1796, as follows:

Lieutenant Colonel Commandant:

THOMAS BUTLER.

Majors:

WILLIAM PETERS and R. B. ROBERTS.

Surgeon:

JOHN F. CARMICHAEL.

Surgeon's Mates:

JOSEPH ANDREWS and DAVID DAVIS.

Captains:

Joseph Brock.	William Eaton,
Edward Butler.	Alexander Gibson.
Henry De Butts.	William Preston.
Joseph Dickinson.	Robert Thomson.

Lieutenants:

Richard Chandler.	Campbell Smith.
William Clark.	Benjamin Strother.
Peter Grayson.	Jonathan Taylor.
Robert Purdy.	Samuel Tinsley.

Ensigns:

Henry Bowyer.	George Salmon,
L. J. Dickinson.	Thomas Swaine.
Francis Johnston.	John Wallington.

The Regiment, during the greater part of these years, served in the State of Virginia, which then required protection for its inhabitants on the frontier against Indians.

1802.

In this year the Regiment was broken up, or disbanded, to meet the requirements of the act of Congress, approved March 16, 1802, fixing the military peace establishment of the United States, which act only allowed two regiments of infantry to the army. A number of the officers were retained in other regiments, a number resigned, and the remainder were discharged from the service. This act was made to take effect from June 1, 1802.

1803-'04-'05-'06-'07.

During these years the Regiment had no existence.

1808-'09-'10.

The Fourth Infantry was reorganized in 1808, in accordance with the following act of Congress:

Act of April 12, 1808,

Providing for the raising, in addition to the organization at that time existing, * * * * *

Five regiments of infantry, * * * * * each to consist of ten companies; each of the * * * * * regiments to have one colonel, one lieutenant colonel, one major, one adjutant, one quartermaster, one paymaster, (each of the three last from the subordinates of the line,) one surgeon, one surgeon's mate, one sergeant major, one quartermaster sergeant, two principal musicians. * * *

Each company of infantry * * * * * to have one captain, one first lieutenant, one second lieutenant, one ensign, two cadets, four sergeants, four corporals, two musicians, and sixty-eight privates.

The Regiment was organized during the months of May and June, 1808, with the following commissioned officers :

Colonel:

JOHN P. BOYD.

Lieutenant Colonel:

JOHN WHITING.

Major:

JAMES MILLER.

Surgeon:

JOSIAH D. FOSTER.

Captains:

W. C. Baen.

John Binney.

David Byers.

George W. Prescott.

Stephen Ranney.

Paul Wentworth.

First Lieutenants:

Nathaniel F. Adams.

R. C. Barton.

O. G. Burton.

Alden G. Cushman.

Nicoll Fosdick.

Charles Fuller.

Samuel Haines.

Samuel Page.

Josiah Snelling, Jr.

William Welsh.

Second Lieutenants:

Samuel Borden.		Benjamin Hill.
J. L. Eastman.		Minor Huntington.
Lewis Harrington.		Ebenezer Way.

Ensigns:

Frederick Conklin.		Milo Mason.
Timothy Gerrish.		Lewis Peckham.
George Gooding.		George B. Peters.
Abraham Hawkins.		Jonathan Simonds.

Under this act the Regiment is reported to have been raised in and about the States of New Hampshire, Vermont, and Massachusetts, and is supposed to have been employed during the years 1808-'09-'10 in protecting the frontiersmen in the territories north of the Ohio river and south of the Great Lakes, as the first official notice taken of the Regiment is during the campaign of General Harrison against the Indians in the northwest.

1811.

In the fall of 1811 General Harrison, then Governor of Indiana Territory, marched against the Indian tribes on the Wabash; the Fourth Infantry formed part of the army. On his approach to the town of the Prophet, the brother of the celebrated Tecumseh, the principal chiefs came out, and on the 6th of November proposed a conference, and requested General Harrison to encamp for the night. Fearing treachery, the troops slept on their arms in order of battle.

November 7, early in the morning, the camp was furiously assailed, and a bloody and doubtful contest ensued; but, after a heavy loss on both sides, the Indians were finally repulsed. This was the celebrated "Battle of Tippecanoe," and was fought near the west bank of the Tippecanoe river, at its junction with the Wabash, in the northern part of Indiana.

After this engagement the Regiment, under the command of Lieutenant Colonel Miller, moved to the southern part of Indiana for supplies, (Indiana and Ohio being, at that time; almost a wilderness,) crossed the Ohio river on flatboats or rafts made by themselves, and encamped at Louisville, Kentucky. After remaining there a short while, it marched along the military road leading to the town of Frankfort, encamped there a short while, thence crossed the Kentucky river, which was very high at the time, and moved on through Lexington, Kentucky, to a point opposite Cincinnati, Ohio; crossed the Ohio river again, and marched through the State of Ohio, towards Detroit, Michigan.

1812.

During the months of May and June the Fourth Infantry, forming part of the army under General Hull, was on the march from Ohio to Detroit.

July 12, the Fourth Infantry, with the army, crossed the Detroit river into Canada, and encamped at Sandwich, on the east bank of the Detroit river, two miles below Detroit, with the professed object of marching upon the British post at Malden, about thirteen miles from Sandwich.

August 7, General Hull, after remaining inactive nearly a month in Canada, while his confident troops were daily expecting to be led against the enemy, suddenly recrossed the Detroit river, and occupied the town and Fort of Detroit, to the bitter vexation and disappointment of his officers and army.

August 8, General Hull sent several hundred men of the Fourth Infantry, under Colonel Miller, Fourth Infantry, to convoy a party approaching his camp with supplies, which had been previously attempted by Major Van Horne, who was defeated near Brownstown by a force of Indians and British.

August 9, the expedition under Colonel Miller met a large force of British and Indians, the latter under the famous "Tecumseh." A battle ensued, and the enemy was routed with considerable loss, near the same ground on which Van Horne had been defeated.

August 16, General Brock, the British commander, crossed the river a few miles above Detroit, without opposition, and, with a force of about seven hundred British troops and six hundred Indians, immediately marched against the American works. While the American troops, advantageously posted, and numbering more than the combined force of British and Indians, were anxiously awaiting the orders to fire, what was their mortification and rage, when all were suddenly ordered within the fort, and a white flag, in token of submission, was suspended from the walls! Not only the army at Detroit, but the whole Territory of Michigan, with all its forts and garrisons, including the Fourth Infantry, which was twenty miles away, at Brownstown, was basely surrendered, on the 18th of August, to the British.

General Hull was afterwards exchanged for thirty British prisoners, when his conduct was investigated by a court martial. The court declined giving an opinion on the charge of treason, but convicted him of cowardice and unofficer-like conduct. He was sentenced to death, but was pardoned by the President, and his name ordered to be struck from the rolls of the army.

After the surrender of Hull, and during this entire year, the enlisted men and several of the officers were held as prisoners in Fort George, Canada, by the British troops. Some of the officers were exchanged, and were assigned to other regiments or commands. By this miserable surrender on the part of Hull the Regiment lost its organization, and was not reorganized until 1815, when it was formed by the consolidation of other regiments.

1814.

In March, the regiments which afterwards, in 1815, were consolidated into the Fourth Infantry, were engaged at the Battle of La Cole Mill, Canada, and after that retired to Plattsburg, New York.

September 6, the regiments which, in 1815, formed the Fourth Infantry, were at Plattsburg, New York, belonging to the command of General Macomb.

September 11, about 8 o'clock in the morning, a general cannonading was commenced on the American works; and soon after the British fleet of Commodore Downie bore down and engaged that of Commodore McDonough, lying in the harbor. After an action of two hours, the guns of the enemy's squadron were silenced, and most of their vessels captured. The battle on the land continued until nightfall. Three desperate but unsuccessful attempts were made by the British to cross the stream, and storm the American works. At dusk the efforts of the enemy relaxed, and they commenced a hasty retreat, leaving behind their sick and wounded, together with a large quantity of military stores. This ended the "Siege of Plattsburg."

In December, a treaty of peace was concluded between the United States and Great Britain, although the fact was not generally known throughout the Army and Navy until some time in February, 1815.

The Fourth Infantry was reorganized March 3, 1815, by consolidation of the Fourteenth, Eighteenth, Twentieth, Thirty-sixth, and Thirty-eighth Regiments of Infantry.

After the reorganization of the Regiment, it was ordered South, and owing to the difficulties with the Creek and Seminole Indians in Georgia, Alabama, and Florida, for several years its history was one of continual marches and countermarches, building of cantonments, and opening of military roads through the wilderness regions of those States; the policy of the General Government then being, that the infantry arm of service should build their own barracks and open roads through the Indian country.

February 29, the headquarters and three companies were stationed at Fort Moultrie, Charleston harbor, South Carolina, and seven companies were at Fort Hawkins, on the left bank of the Okmulgee river, in Georgia, in the Creek country, opposite to the present city of Macon.

In July, eight companies were at Camp Crawford, Georgia, with the headquarters, and one company at Fort Hawkins, and one at Fort Scott, on the right bank of the Flint river, Georgia, in the Creek Nation, not many miles above its junction with the Chattahoochee river.

In December, the headquarters and nine companies were at Fort Gaines, on the left bank of the Chattahoochee river, Georgia, and one company at Fort Hawkins, Georgia; the previous November, the headquarters and nine companies were either at Fort Scott, or on the march to Fort Gaines.

In the commencement of this year the Regiment was on the march to Alabama, and in the month of March established Cantonment "Montpelier," where the entire Regiment was stationed until October, when it was marched back to Georgia, and in November was at Fort Scott. Again it took up the line of march for Florida, to operate, under the command of Major General Andrew Jackson, against the Spanish forces in the harbor of Pensacola.

1818.

In April and May, the Regiment was at Pensacola, Florida, which place, with Fort Barrancas, at the entrance of the bay, had been captured.

September 18, four companies were at Craney Island; the headquarters and four companies were at sea, off Amelia Island, Alabama.

In October, the headquarters and seven companies were at Pensacola, two companies at Fort Barrancas, and one at Fort St. Mark, the old Spanish work, seven miles from the Gulf of Mexico, at the junction of the St. Mark and Wakulla rivers, twenty miles south of the city of Tallahassee.

In November, the headquarters and six companies were at Pensacola, three companies at Fort Barrancas, and one company at Fort St. Mark.

1819.

In January, the headquarters and two companies were at Pensacola, three companies at Fort Barrancas, four companies at Amelia Island, and one at Fort St. Mark.

In February, the headquarters and four companies were at Cantonment "Montpelier," Alabama, four companies at Amelia Island, one company at Fort St. Mark, and one company on the march to Fort Crawford, where it arrived in March.

In May, the headquarters and four companies were at Cantonment "Montpelier," one company at Fort St. Mark, four companies at Trader's hill, on the St. Mary's river, and one company at Fort Crawford, Georgia.

In January, the headquarters and four companies were at Cantonment "Montpelier," one company at Blakely, opposite Mobile, and five companies at Trader's hill, Georgia.

From July to December, the entire Regiment was at Cantonment "Montpelier."

1821.

The entire Regiment was stationed at Cantonment "Montpelier," until it was ordered to Pensacola, after the receipt of the General Order, dated Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, May 17, 1821, which order assigned Pensacola, West Florida, as the station of the Regiment. Its organization, as thus announced, was as follows: Colonel, Robert Butler; Lieutenant Colonel, George M. Brooke; Major, James B. Maney; Captains, Josiah H. Vose, Saunders Donoho, James H. Hook, James S. McIntosh, James M. Glassell, Francis L. Dade, Phillip Wager, Henry Wilson, Richard M. Sands, Francis W. Brady; First Lieutenants, H. R. Dulaney, William Lear, Jeremiah Yancey, George W.

Allen, John Page, Lee Slaughter, Edward Webb, William M. Graham, Edward Alexander, and Thomas Johnson; Second Lieutenants, Joseph B. Shaw, W. H. Mann, R. B. A. Tate, Arthur W. Thornton, John F. Jackson, Geo. Mountz, F. B. Triplett, T. Brook, Edward N. Dulaney. 1 colonel, 1 lieutenant colonel, 1 major, 10 captains, 10 first lieutenants, 10 second lieutenants, 1 sergeant major, 1 quartermaster sergeant, 2 principal musicians, 30 sergeants, 40 corporals, 20 musicians, 420 privates; commissioned officers, 33; enlisted men, 514; aggregate, 547.

As the mails from Washington were then carried by stages and on horseback, some time must have elapsed before the Regiment received this order, and it is probable the movement from Cantonment "Montpelier" did not take place before the month of August.

Companies were now, for the first time, designated by letters.

On the 30th of August, companies A, B, and E, were at Pensacola, F and G at Barrancas. The regiment had been much reduced in numbers, and the other companies were most probably not then reorganized, nor until the Regiment received a part of the enlisted men of the discontinued Eighth Regiment, then stationed at the Bay of St. Louis, Missouri.

Company "I" was organized at Barrancas, Florida, September 19; and Company "H" in October, at the same place.

October 31, Companies A, B, and E were at Pensacola; F, G, H, and I at Barrancas.

December 31, the headquarters and Companies A, B, C, and E were stationed at Pensacola; Companies D, F, G, H, and K at Barrancas; and Company I at Mobile Point, Alabama.

1822.

The Regiment retained the positions it occupied December 31, 1821, except that Company I was removed to Dauphin Island, Alabama, in July or August. The yellow fever having made its appearance in Pensacola, the four companies at that place, and the five companies at Barrancas, which had been relieved by companies of the Fourth Artillery, nine in all, moved from Pensacola in September or October, and erected temporary huts and shelter at two camps, two and one-half miles west of the town, on Bayou Chico, named camps "Hope" and "Brady." These troops commenced the erection of a cantonment, afterwards called Cantonment "Clinch," in honor of the distinguished and much-beloved Colonel of the Regiment. It was completed for nine companies of the minimum organization of the act of 1821, the tenth company being still at Dauphin Island. Each company built its own double block of two rooms of logs, and a house of one story (of logs) of two rooms for officers' quarters. The troops also sawed the boards for flooring, and rived the pine shingles for roofs. In truth, the troops did the entire work, the quartermaster's department only furnishing the few tools to work with, the nails, and other hardware. Scarcely a nail was used to secure the shingles, they being hung on the rafters with wooden pegs. The spaces between the logs were chinked with split pieces of pine, and daubed with clay, and afterwards the whole was whitewashed. This was the mode of erecting quarters by the infantry arm in those days, at scarcely any expense to the Government. They were most comfortable, as they were occupied for several years. No change in stations took place up to December 31.

The headquarters and nine companies moved into their new quarters in September or October. Company "I" returned to Mobile Point, Alabama, June 30, and afterwards joined the regiment at Cantonment "Clinch."

1824.

On the 15th day of January, Companies C, D, F, and G, under Brevet Brigadier General George M. Brooke, the Lieutenant Colonel of the Regiment, sailed from Pensacola for Tampa Bay, Florida, to establish a military post, which, after completion, received the name of Cantonment "Brooke," in honor of the distinguished and popular Lieutenant Colonel. This movement was, no doubt, caused by the fact, that the treaty of Payne's Landing, made by General Gadsden, of South Carolina, formerly of the army, with the Seminole Indians, the bands in Middle Florida, (the Tallahassees, Lower Creeks, and Mickasaukees,) were required to move east of the Suwannee river, join the Seminoles, and move west of the Mississippi river in 1835. Lieutenant Lorenzo Thomas sailed from New York in October, 1823, to join the regiment at Pensacola. The vessel was chartered by Mr. Robert J. Hackley, who was going to Tampa Bay to cut live-oak timber, and during a three weeks' stay in the bay it was explored most thoroughly. Lieutenant Thomas arrived at Pensacola the day before the expedition sailed, and described to General Brooke the place at the head of Hillsborough Bay, at the mouth of the river of that name, (Lock-chee-pop-ko—"sweet acorn,") as the most suitable position for a military post; which place, after examination, he adopted. Perhaps, apart from its military advantages, a more beautiful spot could not have been found in the whole southern country, the place being covered by a large number of live-oak trees, on a gentle slope extending to the bay. The only defences then made were two block-houses at two of the angles of the parallelogram, the line of men's quarters making the exterior line of defence. During the Seminole war this became an important position, and here was established one of the large depots for supplies for the operating armies.

Company "B" was at Barrancas during the year. Company "H" was most probably broken up by the transfer of the men to other companies. Company "K" was opening a road in Alabama, perhaps, during the month of May, June, and July. On the 31st of August it returned to Cantonment "Clinch." Company "I" went to the Bay of St. Louis in September or October, and returned to New Orleans in December. In September, Companies "A" and "K" commenced opening the military road authorized by Congress from Pensacola, via Tallahassee, to St. Augustine. The troops crossed Pensacola bay, opposite the town, and commenced the construction of the road at that point. The road was made under the superintendence of Major Birch, Assistant Quartermaster, and was completed by the troops to the Apalachicola river, fifty miles west of Tallahassee, with a ferry across the river. The remaining portion of the road was finished by contract. As the time approached for the Indians between the Apalachicola and Suwannee rivers to remove to East Florida, Governor William P. Duvall, then at Tallahassee, seeing that the Indians were very dilatory in making their arrangements for leaving, according to the treaty made with them, and fearing difficulties, made a requisition on Colonel D. L. Clinch for troops, and Company E was dispatched from Cantonment Clinch to St. Mark's in September. The presence of the troops, and the friendly Indians of the four towns having reservations on the Apalachicola river, (for the services of these Indians with General Jackson,) exercised a most salutary effect; and the Indians, having journeyed east, Company "E" returned to Cantonment Clinch in December.

December 31, the headquarters and Company "E" were at Cantonment Clinch; Companies "C," "D," "F," and "G" were at Cantonment Brooke; Company "B," at Barrancas; Company "I," at New Orleans, Louisiana, and Companies "A" and "K," on the military road from Pensacola to St. Augustine. Company "H" was probably unorganized.

Companies "A" and "K," from the military road, returned to Cantonment Clinch in January. Company "B" joined Cantonment Clinch, from Barrancas, in June.

Governor Troup, of Georgia, having sent surveyors to run off that portion of the Creek country lying between the Flint and Chattahoochee rivers, which greatly exasperated the Creek Indians, and the Governor having ordered out two companies of militia to protect the surveyors, Major General

E. P. Gaines, commanding the Western Division, ordered Companies "A," "B," "E," and "K" from Cantonment Clinch, (also a battalion of five companies of the 1st Infantry, serving at the same post,) to the Creek country. The 4th Infantry commenced the march July 4, in a heavy rain; but being detained on the route by an order of General Gaines, not to move without a three months' supply of provisions, which had to be sent from Pensacola by water, did not arrive at Fort Mitchell, on the Chattahoochee river, Alabama, until some time in August. The old picket work on the hill, on the right bank of the river, was entirely decayed, and was rebuilt by the troops, with pickets on the old lines, and two block-houses at the diagonal angles. Log huts, with mud chimneys, were built inside for officers and men. The Governor of Georgia desisted from his purpose of surveying the country, but the General Government paid the two militia companies for three months. The payment was made at Marion, Georgia, by Lieutenant Lorenzo Thomas, 4th Infantry.

Company "I" went to Baton Rouge, Louisiana, in September, in consequence of sickness, and returned to New Orleans in November.

Companies "D" and "F" were ordered to open a road from Cantonment Brooke to Colerain, Trader's Hill, on the St. Mary's river, Georgia. The road was opened to Fort King, Seminole agency, distant a hundred and one miles, and subsequently from that place to Pilatka, on the St. John's river, fifty miles distant. Over this military road the troops at Cantonment Clinch received a mail by a soldier on horseback twice a month, and when a failure occurred, which was not unfrequent, the garrison was without intelligence from the civilized world for an entire month, unless, indeed, in the meantime, the little transport schooner "Florida," carrying supplies once a month from Pensacola to the post, should happen to arrive.

December 31, the headquarters and Company H were at Cantonment Clinch; Companies A, B, E, and K, at Fort Mitchell; Companies C and G, at Cantonment Brooke; Companies D and F, cutting a military road from Cantonment Brooke to Colerain, Georgia; Company I, at New Orleans.

1826.

In February companies D and F returned from the military road to Cantonment Brooke.

In April companies A, B, E, and K rejoined Cantonment Clinch, from Fort Mitchell, Creek Nation.

It may not be uninteresting to give some account how infantry regiments were transported, or transported themselves, in a wilderness country years ago, where no railroads existed or steamships could be obtained, as are now in use. When the battalions of the First and Fourth Infantry were ordered to return to Cantonment Clinch, there being but little transportation for baggage or supplies, and none to be obtained in an Indian country, the five companies of the First came to Fort Mitchell, and then each of the nine companies of the two regiments went to work and cut down trees, sawed out the sides and necessary timber to construct a large flat-boat or "broad-horse," as they were called, to contain the company and supplies for the voyage to the Gulf, burned tar-kilns, picked oakum, &c. The boats were launched in the Chattahoochee river; and, all having safely embarked on these boats, without shelter of any kind, started, each company vieing with the others which could first reach its destination. Each boat was propelled with from four to six oars, and being favored with a current, good time was made. Before night-fall the boats tied up by the bank of the river, and the evening meal was prepared. At early dawn the morning meal was prepared and hastily dispatched, and onward went the boats. Arriving at the mouth of the Apalachicola river, no transports could be seen, and the small town of that name, consisting of two or three small stores and a few shanties, was soon examined. After a few days transport schooners arrived, and the troops were embarked, and soon made the short run to Pensacola. Nine companies of troops have rarely been transported so many miles at so little expense.

In October Company B was detached from Cantonment Clinch, to take post at the mouth of the Suwannee river, and established a post named "Fort Duvall," after the name of the Governor of the Territory. This and subsequent movements were made in consequence of the return east of the Suwannee river by small bands of the Indians, who had been required to move from Middle Florida in 1824. These bands, returning to their old cherished homes, roved over the country, and, committing depredations, alarmed the settlers, who were not, as yet, in numbers sufficient to fully protect themselves.

December 31, the headquarters and Companies A, E, H, and K were at Cantonment Clinch; Companies C, D, F, and G at Cantonment Brooke; Company B at Fort Duvall; and Company I at New Orleans, Louisiana.

The predatory bands of Indians still continuing troublesome, some of the companies of the Regiment were moved from station to station, to restrain them and keep them within the treaty limits.

In January Company C was sent from Cantonment Brooke to Wanton's, near the Seminole Agency, and Company F, from the same post, was stationed near the same place, at Fort King. Company H, from Cantonment Clinch, was at Fort Duvall; and Company K, from the same post, was stationed near Fort Duvall.

In February Companies C and F, from Cantonment Brooke, were stationed at Fort McIntosh, in Alabama county, Florida; and Company K, from near Fort Duvall, was at Adams's, thirty miles from Tallahassee, Florida.

In March Company B, from Fort Duvall, was near Tallahassee; Companies F and H near the Seminole Agency; and Company K, from Adams's, was at Cantonment Clinch.

In April Company B, from near Tallahassee, was near the Suwannee river; Company C, from near Camp McIntosh, returned to Cantonment Brooke; and Company I, from New Orleans, was at Cantonment Clinch.

In May Company B, from near the Suwannee river, was at Camp Dickins, Florida; Companies F and H, near the Seminole Agency, established the post called Fort King, named after a former Colonel of the Regiment; and Company F afterwards returned to Cantonment Brooke.

December 31, the headquarters and Companies A, B, E, I, and K, were at Cantonment Clinch; Companies C, D, F, and G at Cantonment Brooke; and Company H at Fort King.

In April Companies B, E, and K were detached from Cantonment Clinch, and took post at New Orleans, Louisiana. In July these three companies went to Baton Rouge, Louisiana.

In August Company A, from Cantonment Clinch, went to Fort Mitchell, Creek Agency, Alabama.

September 24, there arrived at Cantonment Brooke a detachment of men of Companies A, C, D, G, and I, from St. Augustine, Florida.

October 24, Company A removed from Fort Mitchell to the vicinity of Tuckebatchee, Creek Nation, Alabama, at which place it arrived October 26.

December 31, the headquarters and Company I were at Cantonment Clinch; Company A in the Creek nation; Companies B, E, and K at Baton Rouge; Companies C, D, F, and G at Cantonment Brooke; and Company H at Fort King.

February 20, Company B was detached from Baton Rouge, and took post at Fort St. Philip, Louisiana.

July 3, Company H left Fort King for Cantonment Brooke, where it must have arrived the 7th or 8th of the month. On the 14th, Company B left Fort St. Philip for Baton Rouge, where it must have arrived about the 17th. On the 27th, Company A, from the Creek Nation, arrived in the Bay of Pensacola, and on the 30th was ordered back to Fort Mitchell, where it arrived in February. Company B arrived at Baton Rouge on the 16th.

In September Company A was at Fort Mitchell, and Company H at Cantonment Brooke.

November 4, Company D left Cantonment Brooke, to repair the military road from that post to Fort King, Seminole Agency. Company B left Baton Rouge, and arrived at Fort St. Philip on the 13th.

December 31, the headquarters and Companies C, F, G, and H were at Cantonment Brooke, the headquarters having been ordered from Cantonment Clinch in November; Company A was at Fort Mitchell; Company D at Toachotka, on the military road to Fort King; Company B at Fort St. Philip; Company I at Cantonment Clinch; and Companies E and K at Baton Rouge.

1830.

In January Company D was at the bridge across the Withlacoochie river, on the military road from Cantonment Brooke to Fort King.

February 19, Company I evacuated Cantonment Clinch, and arrived at Baton Rouge on the 26th. This was the final evacuation of the post, which had been occupied in 1822. Company G left Cantonment Brooke on the 18th, and arrived at Baton Rouge on the 29th of March. Companies F and H left Cantonment Brooke on the 15th of April for Fort Mitchell; Company D returned to Cantonment Brooke May 18, having executed the repairs of the military road from Cantonment Brooke to Fort King. In April Company D was at Hillsborough, on the military road; Companies F and H were at Fort Mitchell; and Companies E, I, and K were at New Orleans.

Gensel, Company G; William H. Powell, Company H; George M. Randall, Company C; and Henry W. Patterson, Company D;—were present for duty.

January 5, Companies B and C joined the headquarters at Washington, D. C., from the Pacific Coast, having come across the Isthmus of Panama.

February 1, the entire Regiment still in Washington City, taking charge of the Old Capitol Prison, guarding the bridge over the Anacostia river, and patrolling the city.

March 1, the entire Regiment was still on duty in Washington City.

March 10, the headquarters and ten companies, commanded by Lieutenant Colonel, R. C. Buchanan, crossed the Long bridge into Virginia, with the Army of the Potomac; proceeded towards Manassas Junction, on the Orange and Alexandria railroad, but changed direction, and camped about three miles north of Alexandria, naming the place, "Camp California." The companies, when they left Washington, were commanded as follows: Company A, by First Lieutenant C. H. Carlton; Company B, by First Lieutenant A. R. Benedict; Company C, by Captain L. C. Hunt; Company D, by Captain Joseph B. Collins; Company E, by Captain H. M. Judah; Company F, by Captain F. H. Bates; Company G, by Captain Hiram Dryer; Company H, by Captain T. E. Turner; Company I, by Captain R. N. Scott; Company K, by Second Lieutenant R. P. McKibbin. Second Lieutenant William H. Powell was Adjutant, and First Lieutenant William S. Collier was Regimental Quartermaster.

March 27, Regiment embarked on steamers at Alexandria, and proceeded to Fortress Monroe, Virginia; disembarked on the 29th, and went into camp near Hampton, Virginia.

April 1, Regiment was encamped near Hampton, Virginia.

April 4, the Regiment moved to Camp Scott, near Yorktown, Virginia, and worked in the trenches during the siege of Yorktown.

May 1, the Regiment was in camp in front of Yorktown.

May 11, the Regiment, forming part of Sykes' Brigade of Regulars, moved up the Peninsula towards Richmond, Virginia, following the retreating rebel army, which had during the previous night evacuated Yorktown, (leaving buried in the ground, all along the front of their works, numerous torpedoes, the explosion of some of them killing a number of the men of the army,) and, after several days' march, camped on the Chickahominy river, near Gaines' Mill, which camp was called "Camp Lovell," after Colonel Chas. S. Lovell, United States Army.

June 1, the Regiment was still in Camp Lovell.

June 24, the Regiment, with the 1st Brigade of Regulars, (the Regulars having been formed into a Division, and connected with Fitz John Porter's Army Corps,) made a reconnoissance to Hanover C. H., Virginia, to ascertain the whereabouts of Stonewall Jackson's Corps, and returned to Camp Lovell on the 26th of June.

June 26, the Regiment, about retreat, moved towards Mechanicsville, Virginia, to support McCall's Division, 5th Corps, then engaged with the enemy. Night came on before reaching the battle-field, and the Regiment bivouacked on the road.

June 27, the Regiment participated in the Battle of "Gaines' Mill," holding the extreme right of the army, and supporting Weed's and Tidball's batteries. It held the position from eleven o'clock, a. m., until dark, when it retired, under orders, from the field, and bivouacked the same night on the enemy's side of the Chickahominy river. During the night all the army engaged in the fight, crossed the Chickahominy to the right bank, excepting the Fourth Infantry. Having received no orders to move, the Regiment remained on the left bank until after daylight the 28th, when, not seeing any of the army remaining near it, proceeded to cross Grapevine bridge; but finding that this bridge, being the only one left, was being destroyed, they replaced a portion of it, and crossed in safety. In the early part of the engagement, Major Davidson, commanding the Regiment, deserted it, and the command devolved upon Captain Joseph B. Collins, who manœuvred it during the remaining portion of the seven days' fight.

June 28, the Regiment moved from the right bank of the Chickahominy, and about dark arrived at Savage Station, on the York River and Richmond railroad, and the same night marched through White Oak Swamp. The Regiment had left most of its baggage, records, &c., at Savage Station, to be sent South by railroad; but, the enemy appearing at early daylight,

June 29, the regimental and most of the company records, camp and garrison equipage, men's knapsacks, officers' bedding, &c., was burned, to prevent the property from falling into their hands.

June 29, the Regiment was halted near the head of the Quaker road, and placed in position for battle. This position was occupied until the following morning.

June 30, the Regiment moved to Malvern Hill, and was immediately thrown to the front in line of battle.

July 1, the Regiment participated in Battle of "Malvern Hill," Virginia, and held the field of battle all night. The Regiment on this occasion was commanded by Captain Joseph B. Collins.

July 2, the Regiment formed part of the rear-guard of the Army of the Potomac, retiring from Malvern Hill, and marched to Harrison's Landing. During the seven days' fight it was without camp and garrison equipage, and without anything, comparatively, to eat; there being no subsistence or baggage train with it.

July 30, Companies D and E were broken up by an order from the Secretary of War, and the few men remaining were transferred to different companies of the Regiment.

August 1, the Regiment was in camp at Harrison's Landing, on the James river.

August 14, the Regiment left Harrison's Landing and proceeded to Newport News, Virginia, and embarked on steamer Elm City for Aquia Creek, Virginia, August 20.

August 21, the Regiment disembarked at Aquia Creek, Virginia, and proceeded by rail to Falmouth, opposite Fredericksburg, Virginia.

August 23, the Regiment moved out on the Warrenton road, towards Barnet's ford of the Rappahannock, and continued the march day after day until it joined the army of General Pope, at Warrenton Junction, on the Orange and Alexandria railroad.

August 30, the Regiment participated in the Battle of “Manassas,” Virginia. The Regiment was commanded during this movement by Captain Joseph B. Collins, who was wounded during this engagement, and the command devolved upon Captain Hiram Dryer.

[The following is an extract from General Sykes' (commanding Division) report of that engagement:]

“The enemy continuing to outflank our left, Buchanan was ordered to the support of the forces engaged in that direction, and maintained a gallant and bloody conflict with the foe, until, outnumbered, outflanked, and badly crippled, I directed him to retire.”

[The following is an extract from the report of Lieutenant Colonel R. C. Buchanan, Fourth Infantry, commanding Brigade in which the Fourth Infantry was serving:]

“I cannot omit calling the attention of the Brigadier General commanding to the firm and gallant manner in which my Brigade held the enemy in check on the extreme left for such a length of time, and finally prevented his turning our flank. At one time the 3d and Fourth (Infantry) were within thirty yards of one of his Brigades, which made a flank movement to turn their left, when Captain Dryer, commanding the Fourth, gave orders to fire by battalions, and poured three most destructive volleys into it before his fire could be returned. The greatest portion of my loss was at this point, and too much credit cannot be given to officers and men for their coolness and gallantry during the engagement.”

August 31, the Regiment arrived at Centreville, with Army of Potomac, retreating on Washington, from the battle of the previous day.

September 1, the Regiment arrived at Fairfax C. H., Virginia.

September 2, the Regiment marched to and went into camp at a place near Arlington Heights, Virginia, called “Hall's Hill.”

September 6, the Regiment moved from camp at Hall's Hill, and proceeded by daily marches, until it reached the presence of the enemy at South Mountain, Maryland.

September 17, the headquarters and Companies A, B, C,

F, G, H, I, and K, were engaged at the Battle of Antietam, and held part of the center of the lines, immediately in front of Sharpsburg, and covering the bridge over the Antietam creek, on the Frederick and Sharpsburg turnpike. Captain Hiram Dryer commanded the Regiment on this occasion.

October 1, the headquarters and Companies A, B, C, F, G, H, I, and K, were encamped near the Potomac river, about one mile from Sharpsburg, occupying a part of the late field of battle.

November 1, the headquarters and Companies A, B, C, F, G, H, I, and K, were on the march from Sharpsburg towards Warrenton, Virginia, passing along the base of the Blue Ridge Mountains, and occupying, for two or three days during the march, "Snicker's Gap," in the mountains. After arriving at Warrenton, General McClellan was removed from the command of the army, and General Burnside assigned to the command; which changed the plans of operation, and the Regiment proceeded to Falmouth, opposite Fredericksburg, Virginia, and encamped near that place on the 21st of November.

December 1, the Regiment was still in camp near Falmouth.

December 13, the Regiment was engaged in the Battle of Fredericksburg. The Fourth Infantry occupied a line south of the city, running east and west, between the large brick tannery and a brick house on the Richmond and Fredericksburg turnpike. The position they occupied had been taken by them the night of the 13th, and was held until the night of the 14th; the officers and men having to lie down during the entire day, as their position was so well covered by the enemy that it was almost certain death to rise up.

December 16, the Regiment formed part of the rear-guard of the Army of the Potomac in evacuating Fredericksburg. The Fourth Infantry and the 14th Infantry were the two last Regiments to cross the river on the bridge, and then it was taken up behind them, after eight o'clock in the morning.

January 1, the Regiment was in camp on Potomac creek, near Falmouth, Virginia.

January 12, the Regiment moved out of camp and proceeded to Banks' ford of the Rappahannock river, with the Army of the Potomac; but, in consequence of the terrible rains and mud, the campaign against the rebel army was given up, and the Regiment returned to its old camp near Falmouth, Virginia. This was the famous "mud march" of the Army of the Potomac.

February 1, the Regiment was still in camp on Potomac creek, near Falmouth, Virginia.

March 1, Companies B, G, and I were broken up, and the few men remaining were transferred to other companies of the Regiment.

April 1, headquarters and Companies A, C, F, H, and K, were still in camp near Falmouth, Virginia.

April 27, the regimental headquarters and Companies A, C, F, H, and K, together with the Regular Division, moved out of camp, proceeded to Kelly's ford of the Rappahannock river, forded the river, marched on, crossed the Rapidan river at Ely's ford, moved down the plank road leading from Orange C. H., Virginia, to Fredericksburg; and on April 30 met the enemy and drove him about two miles, and were then placed in a defensive position near Chancellorsville, Virginia.

May 1, (Sunday,) the headquarters and Companies A, C, F, H, and K, participated in the Battle of Chancellorsville, Virginia, and occupied position at Chancellorsville until May 4, when they re-crossed the Rappahannock river at United States ford, and proceeded to the old camp on Potomac creek, near Falmouth, Virginia. In re-crossing the river, the Regiment formed part of the rear-guard for the retiring army, and was commanded by Captain Hiram Dryer, Fourth Infantry.

June 1, the headquarters and Companies A, C, F, H, and K were still in camp on Potomac Creek, near Falmouth, Virginia.

June 10, the Regiment, with the Regular Division, moved to Banks' ford of the Rappahannock river, and took up position at that point.

June 13, the Regiment moved from Banks' ford, and marched to the line of the Orange and Alexandria railroad; then, continuing the march day by day, passed successively through Manassas Junction, Centreville, Gum Springs, and Leesburg, Virginia, and on the 26th crossed the Potomac river at Edward's ferry (on pontoon bridges) into Maryland; forded the Monocacy river below the Monocacy Junction, on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad; passed by Frederick, Maryland, Liberty, Johnsville, Union Bridge, Bark Hill, and Union Mills, Maryland, to Hanover, Pennsylvania, where it arrived on the 1st of July.

July 1, the Division commander receiving information that the Union and rebel forces had met at Gettysburg, Pennsylvania, the Division, including the Regiment, was ordered to that point, and the same night bivouacked in the road about five miles east of Gettysburg, Pennsylvania.

July 2, the headquarters and Companies A, C, F, H, and K, (all of the companies that had any organization,) left their bivouac, moved to the field of battle, and took up a position in line of battle near Gettysburg. The position was afterwards changed to one on the ridge south of the town, three miles from the first, the right resting on the turnpike. About three o'clock p. m., the Regiment was ordered forward with the Regular Division, and was thrown into the fight on the extreme left, where it was subjected to a terrific fire. The 3d Brigade of the Regular Division held the high knob on the extreme left, called "Round Top;" the 1st (to which the Fourth Infantry belonged) and 2d Brigades were thrown into the valley at the base of the "Round Top;" the first position being perpendicular to the valley, up which the enemy were advancing. The rebels retired from this, when the two brigades were swung around, parallel to and covering the valley. The order was then given for an advance, which was being handsomely executed when the volunteer troops on their right broke, and they were compelled to retire to the eastern slope of the valley. The Regulars, in the engagement, lost fifty officers and nine hundred and twenty enlisted men killed and wounded, out of two thousand five hundred carried into action.

July 3, the Regiment occupied position on "Round Top" all day, momentarily expecting an attack.

July 4, the Regiment made a reconnoissance to the front, to ascertain the whereabouts of the enemy, and found him still occupying the field in force, although his lines had been contracted.

July 5, the Regiment moved from Gettysburg, following the retreating rebel army; passed by Emmitsburg, Maryland, along the base of the Kittoctan mountains, on the right bank of the Monocacy river; marched all day, without rations, in a driving rain storm, crossed over the mountains; passed through the Middletown valley; on through Fox's gap of the South Mountain range, by Boonsboro', Maryland, to Williamsport, Maryland.

July 15, finding that the enemy had recrossed the Potomac river into Virginia, the Regiment, with the Division, moved from Williamsport in the direction of Harper's Ferry, Virginia; and, on July 17, crossed the Potomac river again into Virginia, at a place called Berlin, below Harper's Ferry, and by a series of marches, proceeded to and encamped at Fayetteville, Virginia.

August 1, the Regiment was in camp at Fayetteville, Virginia.

August 3, the Regiment moved from Fayetteville, Virginia, and after several days' marching went into camp on the Rappahannock river, about half-way between Beverly Ford and Rappahannock Station, Orange and Alexandria R. R.

August 13, the Regiment moved, by way of Orange and Alexandria railroad, to Alexandria, Virginia; and, on August 15, embarked on steamer for New York city, arriving there about the 18th, and immediately went into camp in Washington Square, New York city, having been ordered there with the Regular Division, to assist in suppressing the riots occurring on account of the draft. The Regiment at this point was under the command of Major F. T. Dent, Fourth Infantry.

September 1, the Regiment was still in camp in Washington Square, New York city.

September 12, the Regiment moved from New York city to Fort Richmond, Staten Island, and went into camp on the glacis of Fort Tompkins.

October 1, the Regiment was still in camp at Fort Tompkins, Staten Island.

November 1, the Regiment was still in camp at Fort Tompkins, Staten Island.

December 1, the Regiment was still in camp at Fort Tompkins, Staten Island.

1864.

January 1, the Regiment, consisting of headquarters and only five companies, (the others having been broken up), were in camp at Fort Tompkins, Staten Island.

January 29, the Regiment moved by steamer from Fort Tompkins to Fort Wood, Bedloe's Island, New York harbor, under command of Captain C. H. Brightly, Fourth Infantry.

February 1 to April 1, the Regiment occupied barracks at Fort Wood, New York harbor.

April 25, the headquarters and Companies A, C, F, H, and K, (the only organized companies in the Regiment,) left Bedloe's Island for the Army of the Potomac, under the command of Captain C. H. Brightly, Fourth Infantry, and joined the 9th Corps of that army, near Alexandria, Virginia, about the latter part of the month.

May 1, the Regiment was on the march between Alexandria and the Rappahannock river.

May 6, the headquarters and Companies A, C, F, H, and K participated in the Battle of "The Wilderness," Virginia, commanded first by Captain C. H. Brightly, who was wounded, and left the field; then by Captain Thomas A. Martin, who was also wounded and left the field; then by First Lieutenant George M. Randall.

May 16, the headquarters and Companies A, C, F, H, and K participated in the Battle of "Spottsylvania Court House," Virginia.

May 24, the Regiment participated in the Battle of "North Anna River," Virginia, and was commanded by Captain A. B. Cain.

June 2 and 3, the Regiment participated in the Battle of "Po Potomail Creek," Virginia, and was commanded by Captain A. B. Cain.

June 17, 18, 19, the Regiment was engaged with the 5th Corps in the attack on the rebel lines in front of Petersburg, Virginia, and was commanded by Captain A. B. Cain.

June 22, the headquarters and Companies A, C, F, H, and K, numbering in all less than one hundred and fifty men, were ordered as guard for General Grant's headquarters, at City Point, Virginia, and joined the next day.

July 23 to December 31, the headquarters and five organized companies performed guard duty at General Grant's headquarters, at City Point, Virginia.

1865.

January 1 to March 29, the Regiment remained at headquarters at City Point, Virginia.

March 30, the headquarters and Companies A, C, F, H, and K were ordered from City Point, and joined the headquarters of General Grant, in the field, in the forward movement of the Army of the Potomac on Petersburg, Virginia, and continued the march, day after day, until April 9. The Regiment was present at headquarters of the army, at Appomatox C. H., at the surrender of General Lee and the Army of Northern Virginia.

April 10, the Regiment returned to camp at City Point, Virginia.

May 4, the headquarters and Companies A, C, F, H, and K moved from City Point, Virginia, to Richmond Virginia, for provost duty, and encamped on the western suburbs of the city.

July 1, Companies D and G were reorganized out of a number of recruits that were received by the Regiment in Richmond, Virginia.

July 15, the headquarters and Companies A, C, D, F, G, H, and K moved by steamer, and proceeded to New York City, arriving there on the 18th.

July 18, the headquarters and Companies A, D, F, and G, under the command of Captain C. H. Carlton, were ordered to Fort Wood, Bedloe's Island, New York harbor; Company C was ordered to the Fort at Sandy Hook, New York, under the command of First Lieutenant Thomas F. Quinn; and Companies H and K were ordered to duty at Battery Barracks, New York City, under the command of Captain William S. Collier.

• July 18 to August 31, the Regiment occupied the posts mentioned in the preceding paragraph.

September 1, the entire Regiment, except the unorganized Companies, (B, E, and I,) were ordered to rendezvous and take quarters at Fort Schuyler, New York, at which point Colonel Silas Casey, Lieutenant-Colonel Adam J. Slemmer, and Major Henry M. Judah, joined it from detached service, they having held, up to that time, higher volunteer commands.

September —, a detachment of the Regiment, and a number of the officers, proceeded to West Point, New York, where they deposited a number of the old colors of the Regiment, including those that had been carried through the Mexican War, and the War of the Rebellion. The colors were saluted by the Battalion of Cadets, formed and paraded for the occasion, and were escorted by them to their place of deposit.

October 18, the headquarters and Companies H and K, under command of Captain William S. Collier, proceeded to Detroit, Michigan, and took post at Fort Wayne, with Colonel Silas Casey as Post Commander.
